

A SUDDEN DEATH SUMMONS

WITHIN TWO DAYS AFTER AN OPERATION M. C. WILLIAMS.

Unusual Life — Spanish-American War Veteran—Football Player—Went to Alaska—Lectured.

Maurice C. Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Williams, of York St., died last Friday, Feb. 2, at the Polyclinic Hospital, Philadelphia, aged 45 years. He had gone to Philadelphia on Wednesday of the same week where he underwent an operation on his ear and it is thought the ear drum was punctured as he suffered from great loss of blood. As soon as his condition was discovered by attending physician he was sent Thursday evening to the Polyclinic and died Friday morning. He had been suffering for a period of time with diabetes and such was certified as cause of his death. The body was brought to his home here on Saturday.

Maurice Williams was born here and had a life in which there were more thrills than occur to the usual boy. In his early manhood, he enlisted in the Spanish-American War and left town with Company M, 5th Pa. Vois. He went to Chicamauga with his company and served as a Sergeant, and was honorably discharged with his company at Gettysburg. He attended Gettysburg College in class of 1900 and was with a bunch of boys who won a string of hard-fought football games, and being a robust fellow, was in the thick of the fight, and was twice injured. He took a chemical course at Yale University, and afterwards had a job with a Pa. Coal Company for a number of months, and during this period received an injury to his head which took him many months to recover from at a sanitarium. Then he went to Alaska and spent greater part of two years in that territory, and after returning to the States was with a bureau delivering an illustrated lecture on Alaska. He was a great traveler and has been in many countries. Recently he had been living in York, head of the Williams Chemical Laboratories. The funeral was on Monday afternoon with services by Rev. As to Ousting of Biles.

The Philadelphia North American editorially said a few days ago in the matter of the new hands at the Harrisburg mess:

We hold no brief for George H. Biles, who has held important positions in the State Highway Department for many years and has been acting commissioner since the death of Lewis Sadler. We have never had any personal relations with him, and do not feel called upon to make an issue of the contemptible manner in which he has been treated. Our concern over his dismissal is due to the fact that when he leaves office on March 1 the department will lose the last of the men who planned and developed the great road-building program of Pennsylvania.

To former Governor Sproul, pioneer in highway legislation, and to Lewis Sadler, his commissioner, belongs the credit for the vision, courage and ability that made this great work possible. They approached the problem in a spirit like that of the builders of the great transcontinental railroads; they sought to lay the foundations of a comprehensive system of highways that should not merely meet present needs, but should endure for all time. It was the engineering ability of William D. Uhler and George H. Biles that solved the technical problems involved and carried the great conception into effect. Sadler and Uhler died during the last year of the Sproul administration, and the work was successfully continued under acting Commissioner Biles. Now Sproul's term has ended, and Biles is summarily ousted.

In the task of creating a system of permanent highways for Pennsylvania former Governor Sproul, his commissioner and the two engineers co-operated continuously in framing the policies and dealing with the complex problems incident to the huge enterprise. A striking tribute to their work was the confidence which it inspired, the counties contributing about $300,000 of road funds to be expended under direction of the state highway department.

In achieving this co-operation on the part of the counties numberless new and knotty questions of procedure arose which had to be settled on equitable and practical lines. Acting Commissioner Biles was the only responsible official left in the department who was conversant not merely with the general program, but with all these intricate and important matters of detail. His dismissal, as the first move by a new regime, would be paralleled if the initial act of a new president chosen to run the Pennsylvania Railroad were to discharge the one remaining officer of the corporation familiar with its traditions, operating policies and traffic agreements.

United States Senator Williams of Mississippi spoke his mind and shot home some facts during a heated argument in the Senate last week. He said in part:

"There never was a greater mistake than the statement that the people voted against the League and against Woodrow Wilson. A lot of people on both sides tried to make it the issue, but it never became the issue. The issue really was a lot of German-Americans, hyphenates, who voted against Mr. Wilson because he dared to war on the Kaiser. Also a lot of Irish-Americans, also hyphenates, dooming him to hell because he had appeared to be in alliance with Great Britain. And besides that the reaction from the high taxes we had to collect to carry on the war. If ever there was a party that appeared in a national arena with contemptible and contemptuous motives, it was the Republican Party in the campaign of 1920.

"Now all of you want a new international understanding like the League of Nations, except you want Woodrow Wilson's put out and you want it called by another name. In less than three years you will have it.

Wilson is sick. He did his fighting on the firing line. He fell wounded, shot pretty nearly to death, with your animosity while he fell.

I have never heard one of you express a word of sympathy for him. I have never heard a Republican in this Chamber express sympathy for Mr. Wilson.

If you think you can torture the human conscience and the human sense of justice to the point where, in the future, they are going to justify the defeat of everything right and altruistic and unselfish in behalf of everything that is selfish and money-seeking in nature, you will find that you are mistaken.

"Any man in the Twentieth Century, when the world can be circled in ten days by an airplane, who wants to isolate America from the balance of the European race, wants to isolate America from the industrialism and progress of the world, may be the smartest man personally that he can be, as both of you (Borah and Brandegee) are, but historically he is a fool because he does not appreciate what the trend of the centuries amounts to."

Highway Telephones.

'Who Cook Spoiled'
Make Great Sing.

When Cyrena Van Gordon, prima donna of the Chicago Opera Company was a little girl at Camden, O., and the great Campanini told her she would be the greatest contralto in the world, a fine cook was spoiled. Later she got her musical education at Cincinnati. Even yet, however, her idea of a gala occasion is to invade the kitchen to cook "veal au amuse"—a dish taught her by her grandmother. This is the recipe: "Take one pound of veal and one pound of ham, cutting into small cubes. Simmer until tender. No seasoning is necessary. Thicken the gravy, place in a baking dish and add two finely sliced boiled potatoes. Cover with this rich biscuit dough and bake 20 minutes.

nia and about to be installed this week from Gettysburg to Fort Loudon on the Lincoln Way and to Carlisle.

Mr. Bair, of the C. V. Telephone Co., in company with Mr. Edward Smith, secretary-treasurer and Mr. J. G. Lusby, vice president of Highway Emergency Service, Inc., of Harrisburg, were in Chambersburg arranging for the service and locating positions for the telephone station.

Outlining the purpose of this company, Mr. Smith explains that this link of construction through Franklin, Adams and Cumberland counties brings the total mileage now covered with emergency telephones up to approximately one thousand miles. This is part of a state wide plan and the whole primary and secondary system of State Highways in Pennsylvania will eventually be covered with a network of emergency telephones.

The service consists of a telephone placed in a locked cabinet at approximately one mile intervals on the highway. Access to the cabinets is by means of a key obtained on yearly subscription basis at a nominal figure. Listed in a prominent position in the box are the nearest and best hotels, doctors, garages, and other emergency help. Thus it will be seen that the motorist is never more than a half mile from any kind of emergency help needed. Garages and hotels are under contract to render service twenty-four hours and are of the highest order obtainable. Doctors and hospitals are arranged with also. Thus that worst of all features of travel-inability to obtain help when and where it is most needed is eliminated. However, it is to be born in mind that the telephones are not restricted to emergency use. They may be used for personal, business, social and whatever other purposes that may be desired.

Highway Emergency Service, Inc., is a Pennsylvania Corporation with offices at 227 Walnut street, Harrisburg. The immediate plan of construction outlined for completion before the Spring motor traffic begins includes the connecting up of the following points: Philadelphia to Harrisburg, Baltimore, Trenton and Atlantic City. The Lincoln Way from Fort Loudon to Philadelphia will be finished before Feb. 15, according to present plans. Thousands of key-holders are testifying to the merits of the service in the territory now in operation.

Some Dry Facts.

The wet news continually paraded in public print suggests a wet propaganda toward the making of public opinion that the much illicit selling of booze had better give away to some kind of legally regulated selling. What the subject really needs is the thunders of silence in press and vigilant policing for stills and bootleggers.

Metropolitan journals fly scare heads of the Bahamas having fifty million dollars worth of whiskey for 1923 delivery and that there are many cases of whiskey valued at one million dollars ready for shipment.

Comparatively speaking that is one three hundredth part of the whiskey consumed in the nation in the last wet year, when one billion and a ha-

DARE THE IMPOSSIBLE

IN one of Maeterlinck's wonderful stories he tells of a powerful man of the Middle Ages who conceived great plans and executed them, but always with difficulty. Frequently he almost failed, and succeeded only by superhuman effort. Finally he found that a secret enemy was always working against his most careful plans, neutralizing his most strenuous exertions.

As the years passed he determined to find and destroy this enemy. Life was not worth living with this hidden foe forever encircling him with difficulties. One evening he went out for a walk. He saw another man approaching him. By that strange instinct which warns us of danger he knew that this man was his life-long enemy. He resolved to kill him.

As he approached, he observed that this man wore a mask. But, conscious that this was the antagonist of his life, he said as they met: "You are the man who from my youth till now has been pursuing me, thwarting me, almost defeating me. I mean to kill you, but I will give you a chance for your life. Draw and defend yourself."

The stranger said as he drew his sword, "I am at your service, but first see who it is that you would fight." He removed his mask and the man stood before himself.

This fable is true of every one of us. Where you think an enemy has injured you, look closely and nine times out of ten you will find yourself in the form of your habits.

It is a common practice to blame the world and not ourselves for our failings. Look deep enough and you will usually find that it is not the world that stands in your way, but you yourself.

If there is any evil in us, bad habits will develop it. And there is evil in all of us. Put your strength to the test, but never your weakness. Dare to try the apparently impossible tasks if they are tasks for good: never fear failure—all the world loves a good loser; and when you fail in the right, your defeat is only the beginning of final victory.

Day by day civilization is demanding more of each one of us—more that is pure and strong. Twentieth century society tolerates no weakness, no taint in individual workers. Today every man must be above suspicion. Each one of us must be proof against calumny. Everybody is lied about—sometimes by envy, sometimes by ignorance. Never resent a falsehood about yourself—after all it is a test of your reputation. Let your life, not your words, be your rebuke to slander. You defeat yourself when you stoop to the slanderer's low level.

Noble living is all the armor you need to wear. Silence is the most eloquent answer that can be made to the slanderer and it is the sure searchlight that will reveal the slanderer's shame and put him in complete disrepute.

Be so true to yourself that you never need to fear yourself and you will never need to fear the world.

dollars worth of whiskey were consumed, and at the present prices the Bahama liquor represents over a small fraction.

Alongside of this wet propaganda there has not been enough dry facts showing how much better off the country is with prohibition.

Henry W. Farnham, Professor of Economics at Yale University, was of the opinion that prohibition was going to be a mistake, but after an exhaustive study of results he has become an ardent supporter of dryness. He recently gave the result of his studies in four conclusions: 1. Under prohibition arrests for drunkenness have fallen off amazingly in many places as much as one-seventh of what they had been. 2. Deaths from alcoholism have shown a very marked decrease as evidence by vital statistics of cities and states, and life insurance companies. 3. Misdemeanors, lawlessness and neglect of children have undergone a profound fall during dryness. 4. There is every evidence of increased saving and thrift as shown in savings bank deposits and in the expense of charitable organizations which have found in recent periods of unemployment that they did not have the demand to meet as in similar wet times.

The New York State Hospital Commission have just made public a number of interesting statistics. In 1910, 60,769 patients with mental diseases were admitted to institutions, 10 per cent. being alcoholic insanity, the annual rate per 100,000 population being 6.7. The admissions of 1921 give a percentage of 3.1 for patients admitted with alcoholic insanity. A rate per 100,000 of population of 1.9. That is 1921 saw less than one-third of alcoholic insane patients than 1920 saw. In 1909 of the first admissions to hospitals, 28.7 were due to alcohol while in 1921 the rate was 11.8. The conclusion is an absolute fact that prohibition is paying big by yearly saving thousands of human beings.

Light Plant Sold.

The sale of the Hanover Power Company, Hanover & McSherrystown Street Railway Company and Gettysburg Electric Company by the United Service Corporation, of Scranton, Pa., to the Metropolitan Edison Company, of Reading, Pa., was announced this week.

During the operation of the local properties, while under control of the United Service Corporation, there has been rapid expansion in lighting and power lines that in turn have required many improvements and extensions in the power plant and outside lines.

Most important of these has been the extension of 13,200 volt lines to serve Littlestown, New Oxford, and Gettysburg, and the enlargement of the Hanover power plant to a generating capacity of over 5,000 horse power.

The Metropolitan Edison Company operates electric light and power properties at Reading, Lebanon, Easton, York Haven, and York, as well as numerous other properties in other states, and has established an enviable reputation in the wholesome way in which it operates its public utilities to the satisfaction of its many consumers.

The fact that the Reading concern is a large operator, with transmission lines reaching York Haven and York would indicate that they are most admirably equipped to supply the growing needs the territory serves.

It is expected that the new construction now under way at the Hanover plant and of an additional high tension line to Gettysburg, will probably be carried out to completion, and the change of ownership will not affect the present organization.

East Berlin Railway Company.

After presenting an application last month for permission to operate a passenger and freight bus line between East Berlin, Hanover and York, the East Berlin Railway Company this week has presented another application for operation as a common carrier of freight only between York, Hanover, East Berlin, and Gettysburg.

The commission refused to consider a request for the rights to carry both passengers and freight and the recent application for passengers was his result. U. L. Glatfelter, president of the company, explained that ninety per cent. of the income of the road is from freight shipments, and therefore to abandon all but that business and operate a line of busses carrying both passengers and freight.

After the first hearing, Glatfelter was advised to reach some agreement with Walker Melhorn, who operates the present line between York and Gettysburg, and John Myers, who operates between York and East Berlin. Both protested the granting of the application. It was declared at the last hearing that they had failed to get together and that the two protestants had asked a total of $60,000 for their rights and facilities.

Revised Pension Law Likely.

The Bursum Pension Bill as modified after the recent veto of President Harding, has been reported favorably by the Senate Pension Committee, after elimination of some of the provisions objected to by the President.

The committee retained the provision of the original bill increasing the pensions of Civil and Mexican War veterans from $50 to $72 a month, but modified it by limiting such increases to veterans of 78 years or over. Widows of the Civil and Mexican War veterans 68 years old or more would have their pensions increased to $50 under the bill. The original bill gave the increase to widows of all ages.

The revised bill, according to an estimate from the Interior Department, would cost $78,000,000 during the first year of its operation.

Timber Supply in Decline.

Expert Points Out What Seems to Him Imperative Need of a National Forest Policy.

"One of the most interesting things to come to my knowledge is the serious lack of interest on the part of the people of the United States to save our forests," said Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Forestry association. "Our new growth of timber is not more than one-third of the amount being used or destroyed every year. There is an end to all this," continued Mr. Pack, "and the timbermen, lumbermen and wood-using industries must get together with the forest service and formulate a policy of some kind. We all know about looking the stable door after the horse is stolen, and we can all stand around and wonder what to do when the well runs dry, but that is not going to do when the for six years out? Place your finger on something into which the use of wood in the building does not enter. Rather hard for you to do it, I will say. The newspaper owner knows about the mounting cost of print paper and the cost of the barrel in which you find your flour has gone away up. You cannot cut the paw of the barrel, but they figure big in the high cost of living you bear so much about. We must have a national forest policy in this country and put it into effect."

STORE FUTURE FOOD SUPPLY

Woodpeckers Are Wise Birds and Never Take the Chance of Finding Larvae Rare.

California woodpeckers often pass much of their idle time in the light occupation of filling holes in tree trunks with pebbles. When they are really industrious, however, they manufacture these symmetrical holes and fill them snugly with acorns. Often they allow these acorns to remain in cold storage for several months, and then, when they need extra rations they know where a supply can readily be found. When oaks and pines grow side by side, the birds usually favor the pines as storage trees. This is probably because it is only on such trees that the outer bark presents a suitable surface for drilling the holes. No living oak trees are used, but dead oaks, from which the bark has fallen, are chosen.

The vast number of such holes that a single tree trunk can contain may be inferred from the fact that in 50 feet of a fallen pine tree in the San Jacinto mountains of California it was estimated that there were 31,500 holes. Almost without exception, the acorns are inserted into the holes. The birds take great pains to hammer them in securely. They like not only the acorns, but the grubs that are often contained in them. As for the pebbles, they must make a specialty of them when acorns are not in the market—just to keep themselves in training for handling (or should one say "billings") the new crop.—St. Nicholas

BOOKS READ BY TRAVELERS

Much Difference in Choice Displayed by First and Second-Class Ocean Voyagers.

The writer of the daily literary causerie in the New York Evening Post has had the curiosity to explore the collections of books provided by a steamship for the use of her passengers. He has always had the theory, he says, that in these large and luxurious vessels the second-class library would be likely to be more in line with his own tastes than the first-class library, and his visit to the boat has confirmed this supposition. In the second class, for instance, there were more Stevensons—including "Treasure Island," which was not in the first-class collection. He noticed also in the second-class, but not in the first, some Charlotte Bronte, Wordsworth, Tennyson and Oliver Wendell Holmes. In reply to the question what kind of books the readers asked for most, the library steward in the first class answered without hesitation: "Ninety per cent want detective stories." The library steward in the second class, on the other hand, said that, among the passengers he had to do with, love stories were most in demand.

The Wicked Judas.

During a visit he paid to Oberammergau several years ago the late Mr. Andrew D. White, the American diplomat, made the acquaintance of the Judas, whom he described as by far the best actor in the whole performance. Mr. White remarked to him that he ought to have a double salary, as the Judas had in the miracle plays of the Middle Ages, when this was thought due to him as compensation for the injury done to his character by his taking that part. At this the Oberammergau Judas smiled pleasantly, and replied: "No; I am content to share equally with the others. But the same feeling toward the Judas still exists." He then told Mr. White the following story. A few weeks before, while he was working at his carving bench, the door of his workshop opened and a peasant woman from the mountains came in, stood still, and gazed at him intently. On his asking her what she wanted she said: "I saw you in the play yesterday. I wished to look at you again. You look so like my husband. He is dead. He, too, was a very bad man!" —Manchester Guardian.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

COMPILED BY THE PHILADELPHIA INQUIRY

"WHO STOLE CHARLEY ROSS?"

THE most famous kidnapping mystery in America and one which created more interest the world over than any other crime of the kind ever committed—with the possible exception of the loss of some of the children of royalty—was the disappearance of Charley Ross, young son of a Philadelphia family. For nearly half a century the case has baffled the greatest detectives of the world and, in spite of every effort that has been made, in spite of the expenditure of huge sums of money, the mystery is as deep to day as it was on July 1, 1874, when the boy was first missed.

Christian K. Ross lived in German town, an outlying section of Philadelphia, and Charles was the youngest of his five children. At the time of his kidnapping, the child was only four years old and was playing with his brother, Walter, on the sidewalk in front of the house.

Some days previous to the kidnapping, according to the story which Walter Ross told the police, three men had spoken to the boys and had given them some candy. On July 1, these same men drove up in a wagon and invited the Ross boys to take a ride to the nearest fireworks store. The brothers got in and were driven some distance to a section of the city known as Kensington, where Walter Ross was given a quarter and told to get out and go into the nearest store to make his purchase. When he came out of the store the wagon had disappeared.

After searching in vain for his brother for several minutes, Walter Ross became alarmed and commenced to cry. His grief attracted a crowd of men and he was taken home, but no clue could be discovered as to the whereabouts of his brother. The Philadelphia police searched every part of the city for three days and advertisements were placed in the papers without success until, on the morning of July 4 came a poorly written and ill-spelled letter stating that "Charley is all right, but you will have to pay us before you get him from us and pay us big, too." This letter concluded with the threat that the boy would be instantly killed if any attempt were made to put the police on his trail.

On July 6 another letter arrived demanding $20,000, which Mr. Ross, in spite of the protests of the police and private detectives, agreed to pay. Owing to the want of funds of the police, however, the kidnappers were frightened and failed to keep the appointment which they made with the boy's father.

Not only all America but Europe as well, was now concerned with the Ross kidnapping case and the brightest minds in the detective forces of two continents joined in the search, lured by the size of the reward and the fame which would accompany an actual solution of the mystery. Reports of the missing boy came from all sections of the country and Mr. Ross made more than 200 trips in running down clues which proved to be false, in addition to spending at least $50,000 in his fruitless search. Almost up to the present time, men who have claimed to be Charley Ross have put in their appearance, only to have their stories shattered by some details which fail to match in with the facts.

The nearest approach to a solution of the mystery was the deathbed confession of two burglars named Misher and Douglas, but the truth of their statements could never be verified because they died before giving an accurate description of what they had done with the boy's body.

Mr. Ross continued the search until his death in 1897, and the boy's mother, who died only a few years ago, always maintained that her boy was not dead, but that he would come back to her some day. Her belief was never sustained, however, and the mystery of Charley Ross remains one of the unsolved riddles of the police department, the classic case of successful kidnapping to which all others are compared.

Field Bugs as Toys.

The field bugs, known in America as June bugs, have resumed their place as toys for German children. An extraordinary flood of the beetles has sent hundreds of Berliners into nearby forests and fields to catch thousands of them and sell them to dealers who, in turn, retail them to fond parents and children. The bugs sell at ten for a mark now, whereas before the war a dozen could be bought for a few pennies. The dealer makes 300 per cent profit, those engaged in catching them declare. Farmers encourage the catching of the bugs as playthings for city children, as they are destructive to the foliage of orchards and vineyards. The unusually large plague of field bugs has revived the custom of catching them for sale for the first time since the war. An expert "catcher" usually brings in about 1,000 bugs a day. They live for about ten days as playthings.

Compulsory Error.

"You have made a few mistakes in your policies."
"I was forced to do so," replied Senator Sorghum. "On one or two occasions public opinion in my district went wrong and I was compelled either to quit or to go along with it."

Petet to Mobilize Marketing Leaders

In announcing his policies for the co-operative marketing department of the American Farm Bureau Federation, Director Walton Petet of Tex., says, "We will work through state and district farm bureau officers and leaders. We aim to mobilize agricultural leadership behind an intelligent, constructive and co-operative co-operating marketing program."

The New Cottons Are Displayed!

At Palm Beach the cotton frocks are in their glory, for summer is there.

Also at Palm Beach and indeed many miles north of there the little birds are twittering to each other about their plans for migration northward; for even now the first urge of Spring is in the air, with Groundhog Day past.

And so it is Spring sewing time in thousands of homes--the designing and making the lovely frocks for the warmer days that all are anticipating.

And here the glorious New Silk Tissues are ready as well as the new Gingham in 27 and 32 inch widths, then there is the new Linette in white and colors for the country and city--just in time for the inspection of home sewers who enjoy choosing the tissue, the patterns and colorings that individual taste desires.

Surely the designers never conjured more delightful fabrics than these, and we have gathered a fascinating assemblage of the choicest tissues that have come from the looms.

No matter whether you are ready to decide now or not, come and enjoy the exhibition while everything is so exquisitely fresh and new.
